CALL FOR PAPERS

Restorative Justice publishes peer-reviewed articles. We hope you will consider submitting a manuscript for publication. Instructions and guidance on how to submit a manuscript can be found at www.hartjournals.co.uk/rj/contrib.html

For further information or to send in a contribution, please contact the Managing Editor Estelle Zinsstag at RJeditorial@hartpub.co.uk

About Restorative Justice

Restorative Justice seeks to facilitate the development and exchange of the best and most rigorously researched theoretical and practical scholarship within the domain of Restorative Justice (RJ). It aims to gather and present in a systematised way the fruits of academic research as well as practice and policy related information on RJ worldwide. We hope thereby to deepen empirical and theoretical knowledge and achieving a fluent exchange of ideas which will stimulate debates within the field of RJ and advance the development of RJ worldwide in a critical and independent way.

Restorative Justice publishes original, ground-breaking and innovative articles about RJ and contains a vibrant book review section in which new books relevant to RJ are reviewed by leading scholars in the field. As such the journal seeks to be the leading worldwide forum for those working in the field of RJ - academics, researchers, practitioners, policy-makers and interested citizens. A subscription to Restorative Justice consists of 3 issues.
